Read the passage and answer questions 23-30.

1. Throughout history, human behavior seemed impossible to understand. Teachers wondered why some students were good at math but other students were not , why some people are kind but others are not. In the early 19th century, a German doctor thought he could answer these complex questions. His name was Franz Joseph Gall.

2. Dr. Gall believed that the brain was the source of human behavior. He wondered if the functions of the brain created bumps on a person's skull (the skull is the bone around a person's head). The bumps would tell the doctor about the person's behavior.

3. Dr. Gall began to test this idea. He thought he could link every bump on a human skull to a certain brain function. He created a complex map of an average human head. The map had 27 areas, some of them were friendship, music, bravery, humor . He named this mapping of the human skull "phrenology".

Read the passage and answer questions 23-30.

1. It is said that the Coca-Cola bottle is the most recognized object in the world. Hundreds of millions of people can recognize a Coke bottle by its shape, even if they cannot see it! And the famous Coca-Cola logo is the most famous logo in the world. Unlike any other famous com-mercial logo, it has not changed in 100 years!
2. But the story of Coca-Cola is older than that. It was in 1886 John Pemberton, a druggist in Georgia, invented a new type of syrup, coca leaves, sugar and cola nuts, plus a few secret ingredients! Pemberton sold it as a medicine and with its coca (the source of cocaine), it must have make people feel good!
3. Nevertheless, Pemberton's medicine was not very successful, so he sold his secret formula to another druggist Candler. Candler was interested, because he had another idea; he thought that Pemberton's "medicine" would be better if it was mixed with soda. Candler was thus the man who invented the drink Coca-Cola.
4. Before long, other people became interested in the product, including a couple of businessmen who wanted to sell it in bottles. The famous bottle, with its very distinctive shape, was designed in 1916. During the First World War, American soldiers in Europe began asking for Coca-Cola, so the Coca-Cola company began to export to Europe. Now it is popular in all over the world.

1. Are there still cowboys in the American West? The answer is certainly yes! There are still thousands of cowboys in the American west. They still ride horses, and they still carry guns but they don't spend their time fighting Indians. Although they often travel on four wheels, not four legs, cowboys still have to be expert horsemen too. They ride horses very regularly.
2. Cowboys are working men. They look after the herds of cattle that live on the prairies in the mountains, from Texas to Canada. They have lots of jobs to do, they have to mark cattle so that they can be identified, they have to move cattle from place to place, they have to vaccinate them and check that they are healthy. They also have to inspect miles and miles of fences.
3. This profession is different from other jobs, but it can be hard work, with long hours. Besides, many cowboys are not very well paid. It can also be a dangerous job. Cowboys do not often fall off their horses, of course! They have to be excellent rider, but they carry guns for two reasons. Firstly, they may have to kill an injured animal - a cow or even a horse. Secondly, they may encounter dangerous wild animals, such as rattle snakes. There are bears and wolves too, but they do not usually attack humans.

Read the passage and answer questions 23-30.

1. Jeans were the classic clothes of the American West. In 1853, a young tailor from Germany, called Levi Strauss, began working in San Francisco, Levi sold thick canvas to miners, the miners used the canvas to make tents. One day, a miner told Levi that he could not find trousers that were strong enough for work in the gold mines. Levi decided to make some trousers out of canvas. Very soon, he had sold all the canvas trousers he had made! They were just what miners wanted.
2. However, the canvas was rather heavy. Levi therefore began to look for a different textile; soon he found a heavy textile from France; it was called serge de Nimes. Americans just called this de Nimes, and this name soon got reduced to denim.
3. Denim was a bit lighter than canvas, but it was very strong. However, original denim was almost white, and miners did not like the color! Their denim trousers got dirty as soon as they began working! Levi Strauss therefore decided to use colored denim, and he chose dark blue.
4. After the Second World War, jeans became popular all over the world. Today, blue jeans are made over the world – most of them in Asia. Very few jeans are now made in the USA, because of the cost: but it is still possible to buy blue jeans that are made in San Francisco.

Read the passage and answer the questions 23-30.

1. Sigmund Freud was born in Austria. He was famous for his psychoanalytic theory. He developed the technique of psychoanalysis in his treatment of patients with mental disorders. His most famous book "The Interpretation of Dreams" was published in 1900.
2. Freud argued that we all have an unconscious mind as well as a conscious one. The unconscious is where our motivations originate and our fears are buried. Memories, especially from childhood, have a huge influence on the way we are now, but we are largely unaware of their significance. We deny or resist becoming conscious of these motives.
3. Freud's proposals came at a time when strict scientific methods were seen as the only way to discover truth. By introducing the notion of the unconscious, Freud undermined the belief that we are in control of our actions, thoughts, an behaviors at all times. He is commonly referred to as "the father of psychoanalysis" and his work has been highly influential.

Read the passage and answer the questions (23-30).

1. "What did we use to do before there was television?" How often we hear statements like this! Television hasn't been with us all that long, but we are already beginning to forget what the world was like without it.
2. Before we admitted the one-eyed monster into our homes, we never found it difficult to occupy our spare time. We used to have hobbies, we used to entertain our friends, we used to read books and listen to music. All that belongs to the past.
3. Whole generations are growing up addicted to TV. Food is left uneaten, homework undone and sleep is lost. It is now standard practice for mother to keep the children quiet by putting them in the living-room and turning on the set. It doesn't matter that the children will watch rubbishy commercials or spectacles of sadism and violence – so long as they are quiet. It has severe effects on children and it seems to be able to cause anxiety.
4. There is limit to the amount of creative talent available in the world. Every day, television consumes vast quantities of creative work. That is why most of the programs are so bad. Little by little television cuts us off from the real world, we get so lazy. It prevents us from communicating with each other. We only become aware how totally irrelevant television is to real living when we spend a holiday by the sea or in the mountains, far away from civilization.

23. What is the main idea of the passage?
A) Television doesn't make people lazy.

Read the passage and answer questions 23-30.

1. At the start of the 20th century, a new city was beginning to grow on some flat land near the sea in southern California. Its name was Los Angeles - the name of the old Spanish mission that had been there for many years. At the same time, a new industry was just being born; the cinema.
2. America's movie industry began life in New York, but by 1910, movie-makers were moving to Los Angeles. In New York, everything was too expensive; workers, land, taxes. Worse than that, it was difficult to make movies in winter, because it was too cold. By contrast, the Los Angeles region was full of advantages. In California, they could make films all through the year; and everything was cheaper. In particular, there were lots of land for sale.
3. The movie-makers found what they needed a few miles outside Los Angeles and before long, large new studios were being built in an area called Hollywood, at the foot of some small dry hills. Movies quickly became very popular, particularly after "talkies" first appeared in 1925. Nevertheless, movies were expensive to make, and film companies needed money - lots of it.
4. For this reason, Hollywood rapidly became dominated by a small number of big companies. Once Hollywood could make films just for America, today it has to make them for the world. Today, thanks in part to Hollywood, people everywhere have similar dreams. We now live in the age of global culture. Hollywood did not invent this culture - but for better or for worse, it has become one of the most powerful elements in it.

Read the passage and answer the questions (23-30).

1. Highlining is a very dangerous extreme sport. In this extreme sport, performers move on a rope between two hills or two high places. It started in 1980s, but it became more popular after American rock climber Dean Potter performed his demonstration in 2012.
2. It required lots of courage. Potter's line was between the two sides of the Grand Canyon in China. He walked without any safety items. After two exciting minutes, he safely reached the opposite side. Later, he wrote on his website about his experience. "Walking on a line felt like flying, and it was dangerous and challenging. I felt excited. I heard the wind and the birds flying next to me – but I was not thinking about anything at all. I felt like I walked in the space. There is nothing like it."
3. Now, hundreds of people try highlining in the world. In Turkey, many fans come together in Antalya at the Turkish Highline Carnival in February every year.

Read the passage and answer questions 23-30.

1. Today's way of conducting business is informal so that's what we should aim for in our business writing too – a friendly, conversational style. We should use short words and simple expressions, short sentences and paragraphs which are clear and concise but still courteous.
2. Messages which are sent without much thought or planning, with important details missing, or with spelling and punctuation errors, create a very bad impression. Similarly, the common courtesies of a greeting and sign-off should not be neglected for the sake of speed. Finally, a moment taken to fill in the "Subject" line will be appreciated by a busy recipient, who will be able to see what your email is about before they decide to open it.
3. Nowadays, people use different abbreviations and punctuation. Using abbreviations is fine with a friend who you know will understand them, but should otherwise be limited to those that are already common to the English language, such as BTW (by the way). As far as punctuation is concerned, a row of exclamation or question marks after an important point may be acceptable for chatting with friends, but could look out of place in other contexts. The main point is: don't overdo it.

23. What is the passage mainly about?
A) Using different abbreviations
B) Advice for writing emails to colleagues and to friends
C) Using short words and simple expressions
D) Messages which are sent without planning
E) Spelling and punctuation errors

24. Which statements are true according to the passage?
1. It is very important to use abbreviations when you write emails to colleagues.
2. We shouldn't use short words, simple expressions which are not clear.
3. Messages which are sent without planning create a very bad impression.
4. When we write messages we shouldn't mention important details.
5. We shouldn't write messages with punctuation errors.
A) 2, 3, 5 B) 1, 3, 5 C) 1, 2, 4 D) 3, 4 E) 1, 5

25. Complete the sentence according to the passage.
Messages which are sent should … .
A) be difficult to understand
B) contain many errors
C) create an unacceptable impression
D) be courteous
E) be written without much thought

26. Which of the following is not typical of emails?
1. They should be clear.
2. They should contain irrelevant details.
3. They should be comprehensible.
4. They should be repetitive.
A) 2, 3 B) 1, 4 C) 2, 4 D) 1, 3 E) 1, 2
